Old Dominion College

As freshman at Portsmouth General Hospital, the majority of our classes are held at Old Dominion College. The classes consist of the basic sciences and English and give the student nurse the necessary background for professional nursing. Not only does the college offer collegiate educational status to the student nurse, but also a social binding with life outside the hospital.

Introduction to Nursing I and II

MRS. EDWARDS, Instructor, observing students

Freshman students begin their study of clinical nursing with Introduction to Nursing. This course emphasizes the scientific principles which relate to the general nursing care of the individual patient and is correlated with clinical experience which is begun eight weeks after admission to the school.

Medical-Surgical Nursing

Operating Room

Medical-Surgical Nursing is a course which includes both theory and clinical practice. The theoretical portion integrates related knowledge and principles of patient care. Clinical practice entails the care of selected patients who have medical and surgical problems, as well as special experience in the Emergency Room, Operating Room, Intensive Care Unit, Inhalation Therapy, and Public Health Clinics.

Pharmacology

Drugs and Solutions and Introduction to Pharmacology are presented during the second semester and summer session of the Freshman year. The course in Drugs and Solutions stresses basic principles of weights, measurements, and legal regulations pertaining to the use of drugs. The Introduction to Pharmacology presents a beginning study of drugs with emphasis placed on their therapeutic use. Clinical experience in the administration of drugs is begun at this time and continues throughout the entire program. Pharmacology is integrated throughout all clinical courses.

The Senior Students have a twenty-four week experience in Maternity Nursing and Nursing of Children. The program includes supervised experiences on the nursing units with visits to the Public Health Pre-Natal and Well-Baby Clinics, and Obstetrician's and Pediatrician's offices. Community agencies are also included in the learning experiences.

Miss Mary Jo King, R.N., B.S.N. is our Maternity Nursing instructor. Miss Florence Brooks, R.N., B.S., is our instructor in the Nursing of Children

Leadership Skills

In this six-week course taught by Mrs. Futtrell, we develop the skills necessary for us to assume the leadership of a hospital unit. During this time, we work evening and night shifts as well as days. The senior student learns just what it takes to function as "charge nurse."

Professional Adjustments

This course, taught by Mrs. Daniels, Director, is a six-week non-clinical course. The senior student preparing to graduate is made aware of the factors that have influenced the growth of the nursing profession and the opportunities and responsibilities of a professional nurse.

Nursing Seminars

During this six-week course, seniors meet in small groups to discuss the factors comprising excellence in nursing care. The seminars are prepared and conducted by the students under the direction of Mrs. LaValle, we share the knowledge gained from previous courses and that gained from independent research.

Looking Back

In September, 1965, anxious, enthusiastic girls became the freshman class of Portsmouth General Hospital School of Nursing. Everything during those first few weeks was new and exciting; there were many friends to make, rules to learn, and studies to pursue. The Junior Class helped with our orientation to the school with the traditional "Rat Day". During this day we wore our hair in many tiny braids, wore our clothes inside-out, and performed according to the dictates of the Junior Class. It was a difficult time for us, but we gained some class unity and together we praised Joyce James who had been named Best Rat. Shortly after our orientation we elected Judy Rickman, Madlyn Culpepper, Paula Odell White, Joyce James, and Gail Crumpler as class officers, and with Mrs. Edwards as our advisor we began our studies in earnest.

Although we were attending Frederick College and also take Introduction to Nursing at the hospital campus which was really more than enough to keep us busy, some of the class still found time to short-sheet a few beds, roll coke bottles in the hall, and throw classmates into the shower. There are some very fond memories we will hold of that freshman year; the times the bus to Frederick broke down, the day Vickie sprouted wings and flew across the bus, the Frederick Freshman beanies we wore, bones, muscles, and pigs.

The capping ceremony marked the beginning of the second semester. We were so proud to sing the Nightingale Pledge during that impressive ceremony. This did not mark any decrease in our study load, however. With nutrition and pharmacology added to our schedule, we studied hard. As exam time approached, we thought that the end had truly come. However, we did pass, and eagerly awaited the change which would take place during the summer session. Now we were beginning to gain confidence in administering nursing care, and we were ready for the responsibilities which were added.

As Juniors, we chose Madlyn Culpepper, Winnice Boush, Arlene Baines, Carol Rice, Gail Crumpler, and Pauletter Burch and Mrs. Jackson as our officers and advisor. Then it was autumn, and we went on our psychiatric affiliation. Sykesville will always be surrounded with memories and many stories of Charlie and "Freight Train", the mice and the magnificent fall foliage. We concluded this experience with a better understanding of ourselves and others as well. It was Christmas time when we returned home. During the winter, Bertha Harrison was selected as Miss Student Nurse, and the entire class shared the honor bestowed on her. We continued our studies at a rapid pace with Medical-Surgical Nursing III in the spring and IV in the summer.

September came and at last we were able to add the coveted black band to the cap and officially enter our senior year. We chose Winnice Boush, Joan Britt, Judy Rickman, Arlene Baines, Gail Crumpler, Paulette Burch and Mrs. Eadie and Mrs. LaValle to guide us through our senior year. Paulette Burch was elected the Alumnae Queen and Judy Rickman represented our class at the Alumnae Dance. We chose our graduation uniforms, and at the same time we were introduced to Maternal and Child Health. We were awe-struck at the sight of the birth of a baby.

We learned the importance of "using psychology" in pediatrics. The completion of our three-year program was in sight as we began Leadership Skills, Professional Adjustments, and Nursing Seminars. There is always a flurry of activity just before graduation, and ours was no exception. There was the evening we went to the dinner-theater, and then the traditional Parent-Daughter Banquet.

May 12th brought parents, husbands, and relatives to the Park View Baptist Church to watch as we received the diploma and pin which signify the graduate of Portsmouth General Hospital School of Nursing. There was a feeling of accomplishment mixed with nostalgia as we left the church with the realization that we had passed through a portion of life which could never be re-captured.

BERTHA HARRISON

Miss Harrison, now a senior student nurse, competed and won the title of Miss Student Nurse of Portsmouth General Hospital School of Nursing last spring. She also represented our school at the April district meeting of the Student Nurses' Association of Virginia. Miss Harrison, an altogether pleasing person, maintains an above average academic record. In addition, in order to be named Miss Student Nurse, she must: be a member of S.N.A.V., possess an excellent character, and practice good public relations. All contestants composed and delivered a speech on "A Better Future Through Understanding." Miss Harrison stated in her winning speech, "If we as student nurses are to have a better future, we must try to completely understand our fellow workers, our patients, and most of all, ourselves."
